

Domino's Apartment

Domino is HIV-positive. AIDS comes from Africa. How apt, then, that she is wearing a zebra pattern.

The building number is 265. $2 + 6 + 5 =$ unlucky 13. Isn't red the international color of warning?

Bill is taking a risk with Domino. Isn't it funny that she lives next to a lotto store?

Fitting in with the sexual themes of Eyes Wide Shut is an advertisement taped up in the lobby of Domino's apartment building: REICH ORIENTED PSYCHOTHERAPY.

These glowing lights look as sick as Domino. They're flaring up, like sores, or a rash.

Heart of Darkness: Isn't it in the nature of this dreamy film that Domino's bedroom would be decorated in an Africa theme? Notice the African masks on the walls, and the mock-Congo flowing along the floor.

Another example of the film's wry humor.

Domino has a tiger on her bed. In the last scene of the film, Bill and Alice speak their last lines of dialogue while standing alongside a display of these exact same tigers.

NUALA: "Don't you want to go where the rainbow ends?"
